Man Collapses, Dies After Visit To Cemetery

Harry Alsop, 52, yesterday planted flowers over the grave in which he will be buried Tuesday.

Stricken with a heart attack, Mr. Alsop, who lived at 1106 K street N.E., collapsed in the family lot in Congressional Cemetery.

According to his brother William, 1309 Potomac avenue S.E., who was with him at the time, the two brothers went to the cemetery about 11:30 a.m. yesterday to plant flowers in the newly sodded ground of the family lot and over the grave of another brother, Samuel, who died last June. At the end of their task about 90 minutes later, Harry Alsop, who was collecting the garden tools, suddenly collapsed.

With the aid of a cemetery attendant, William Alsop carried his brother to his car and rushed him to Casualty Hospital. He was pronounced dead on arrival. District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald attributed Mr. Alsop's death to the heart attack.

Mr. Alsop had been in good health, according to his brother, until the time of the collapse.

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday at the residence with burial in the family lot in Congressional Cemetery.
