B. Agee Bowles Dead; Realty Broker, Banker

B. Agee Bowles, 77, a retired banker and real estate broker, died of cancer yesterday at Suburban Hospital. Mr. Bowles, of 4605 Hunt ave., Bethesda, began his career in banking more than 50 years ago as a runner for the old Potomac Savings Bank located in Georgetown. Later he became executive vice president of the bank, a post he held until 1933.

He then entered the real estate business and had offices in Georgetown and Montgomery County. He retired about four years ago.

Active in citizens groups in Georgetown, Mr. Bowles was past president of the Georgetown Citizens Association and for several years a delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

He was a member of the Bethesda Christian Church, where he was a deacon and head usher, and was a charter member of the Congressional Country Club.

Surviving are his wife, Marjorie Harbaugh Bowles, of the home address; and three children, Judson W., of Washington, and Phillip H. and Linda Lee, of the home address. His first wife, Caroline P.H. Bowles, died in 1940.

Services will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday at Bethesda Christian Church, with burial in Congressional Cemetery.
