

William H. Page

(- 29 Mar 1850)

The National Intelligencer, April 1, 1850

Fatal Accident

On Friday morning last, William Page, while at work on a scaffold inside the Smithsonian Building, fell from the same, and so dreadfully fractured his skull as to cause almost instant death. It seems the unfortunate man, who bears a good character, was warned of the dangerous position in which he stood. The deceased was interred yesterday by the society of Odd Fellows.