Apoplexy Is Fatal To Noted Musician

Louis F.W. Weber Was Member of Marine Band and Later Orchestra Leader

LOUIS WEBER.

Funeral services for Louis F.W. Weber, for about a quarter of a century a member of the Marine Band, will be held at the family residence, 725 7th street southeast, at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon. Burial will be in Congressional cemetery. Mr. Weber died at his home at 7 o'clock last night, following a second stroke of apoplexy last Wednesday. He was first stricken about a year ago.

Mr. Weber was born in Baltimore, Md., in 1834, came to Washington in 1838 and had lived here ever since. He had been actively engaged in musical endeavor all his life and enjoyed the distinction of having directed the orchestra at the inaugural ball of President Buchanan in 1857, as well as that of President Lincoln in 1861. During his life of nearly four-score years he was identified with the growth of Washington and always took a keen interest in all local affairs.

Belonged to Many Organizations

He was connected with a number of organizations, among which was the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants and Musicians' Union. He was also a member of Naval Lodge, No. 4, F.A.A.M.; a Royal Arch Mason and a member of Columbia Commandery, No. 2, and Almas Temple, Order of the Mystic Shrine.

Mr. Weber leaves four son – George W. Weber, a member of the Washington Stock Exchange; William H. Weber of the government printing office; Louis K. Weber of the bureau of engraving and printing and Harry M. Weber, an orchestra leader in Memphis, Tenn. – and two daughters – Mrs. Carter Catts and Miss Hattie B. Weber, both of this city.

After leaving the Marine Band in 1867 Mr. Weber was a member of an orchestra under the leadership of his father, Christian Weber, which was noted in its day, and succeeded his father as leader of the organization, continuing in charge until he retired from active duties in 1900.

The pallbearers will be selected from the different organizations of which he was a member, and Naval Lodge will, according to Masonic custom, participate in the ceremonies.
